Crawl tunnels are a classic fixture on most playgrounds, but few look as unique as the Freestanding Bones Tunnel. The uncommon slatted design allows sunlight to peek through, alleviating any fear in children uncomfortable within confined spaces. Additionally, other children can see if anyone is climbing through and parents can keep an eye on their kids while they play. Crawling is a vital and beneficial exercise for young children as it helps them build muscle and develops strength and coordination. Tunnels encourage this activity and can stand alone or be incorporated into a larger play system. Their simplicity also encourages imaginative play, promoting creative thought as children make up games and embark on journeys with their friends. All sorts of amazing adventures can be had while climbing and maneuvering through the Freestanding Bones Tunnel.
