Small but mighty, Irvington is a play structure that takes up a small amount of space yet makes the most of it. Play structures designed for kids two to five years of age can be hard to come by, but Irvington is one such structure. It combines a handful of disparate elements into one, cohesive structure that kids will love. The ground level of Irvington features a Tic Tac Toe Panel, which kids can use to play a friendly game with each other. Moving on up the structure using the stairs or the Snake Climber, children can rest inside the Bubble Panel and gaze out at the world around them, then make a thrilling descent back down to the ground using the Double Slide. There's no shortage of ways to incorporate Irvington into your playground.
